(Pocket-lint) - Harry Potter: Puzzles & Spelling is a new mobile game for iOS, Android, Facebook and Amazon devices - and pre-registration is now open, so you can sign up on Google Play or in harrypotterpuzzlesandspells.com to be the first to be alert when launching a new game. Coming soon, the game is an officially licensed match it's also one of the few mobile games to feature Harry himself, along with fans of Hermione Faves, Ron and more. It is steeped in Wizarding World themes, with spells and potions on locked through progress, plus pieces of the puzzle including chocolate frogs and sweets and other Pottermore items. Experience points can be earned in the game, which can be used to gain new magical abilities, plus levels and customize the unique character to the player. Players can form and join clubs, discuss and compete in challenges, and even play against other players online. The game is available to download now, but it will be released in July. You can sign up now at harrypotterpuzzlesandspells.com. "We're really excited about the game," says J.K. Rowling. "It's been a long time coming and we're really looking forward to it." The game is set to release on July 21, but it will wait for fans around the world to get their hands on The Puzzle & Spelling. The game was first available in the Philippines as part of a soft launch period, but it will soon be released worldwide. Writing by Rik Henderson. Editing by Chris Hall. The opinions voiced by entrepreneurs are their own. Whether you're a true or muggle person, you've got to hand it over to J.K. Rowling: she finds the magical elixir of entertainment that attracts both young people and adults. And older Harry Potter fans aren't just lining up on the midnight movie show; they also brought their Mania Potter to work. From capturing the latest news about their favorite fiction wizards on sites like MuggleNet and The Leaky Cauldron to engaging in discussions with colleagues about what the final book to bring, the Harry Potter frenzy has arrived. And offices across the country will be forced to deal with it. The fifth film, Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix, opens on July 11, and the last novel, Harry Potter and The Deathly Hallows, hit the bookstore shelf at midnight on July 21. While workers aren't busy chatting about everything Harry Potter is during the working day, their productivity can experience a celebration of reading all night or a midnight movie screening. In fact, even in our walls at The Media Entrepreneur, the excitement over the final Harry Potter novel is a breeder. The senior VP and editorial director, Rieva Lesonsky, plans to take Monday after the release of the book to finish it off, or recover from a sleepless weekend reading. For Lesonsky, work is the only place where people share the same love for Rowling's invention. In his office, Sarah Foster, managing an editor for an engineering association in Atlanta, said there were seven devoted fans. Lurking and colleagues took half a day out of work to get in line with the premiere of the fifth Harry Potter. Other workplace rituals included going for lunch shortly after book broadcasts for discussion. Foster says he is addicted to Potter sites like The Leaky Cauldron and also participates in the Harry Potter email book club with another colleague and two friends. When the happiness of the final book has been worn, Foster says, "We'll have a party." He's not the only one to do this. "I'm going to have a party," says Noble, chairman of the education department and director of the graduate teacher education program at Le Moyne College in Syracuse, New York. Cathy Leoprande has reason to do her office chit Potter. This summer, he teaches Harry Potter graduate courses. Multi-disciplinary Perspective. She also recently started an adult Harry Potter discussion group and attended an academic conference dedicated to the wizard with her son. Leoprande had made an early booking of the last three copies of the book for his family and plans to attend a midnight party for revelations with other Devoted Potter followers. Since July 21 marks a significant moment in Harry Potter's history, the release of a midnight bookstores is likely to be more crowded than usual. To prepare for the public, Barnes & Noble hosts the Midnight Magic Costume Parties at almost every one of the more than 800 big emissions night stores. Will your employees or colleagues be there? Facing Potter Madness Rather from fighting the wizard, as a business owner, you might want to embrace the madness. Scheduling discussion group Harry Potter or lunch Monday after the release of the book allowed employees to know why they didn't have to hide their love for the series and give them the perfect outlet without disturbing work later in the day. To help prevent employees posting their thoughts on various Potter blogs while on the clock, you can make a place on your intranet or company blog for after-book conversations. A video software company in San Diego is planning a generous solution to Harry mania. Drew Waters, artistic director for the company, says recreation committee plans Harry Potter's personal screening Order of the Phoenix evening before the official film was released. The company rents movie theaters for viewing and allows employees to bring guests. Popcorn and soda were included. It's crazy. About 275 people appeared. According to Waters, there's even a waiting list and phone chain for people who can't get up. Everyone loves it. Image: Warner Bros., 1492 Photos; Heyday Film Throughout the Harry Potter franchise, viewers and readers discovered a lot of spells, some good and some weren't that great. These spells can be used to do almost anything, from cleaning the house to calling things, and from cheering people up to cured injuries. Some of the most common spells heard throughout the series include Unbreakable Vow, Stupefy, Expecto Patronum, Expelliarmus, Alohomora, and Lumos. They are used by magic and wizards not only to make their lives easier but also help them achieve their goals. All students of Hogwarts expect to be able to cast these spells, and even the most popular students can find themselves in trouble if they don't know how to use them.
